Projects

<http://enslaved.org/> (Faculty member Kari Zimmerman is a board member and contributing researcher) – a digital hub of collaborative research on the transatlantic slave trade, its suppression, and the lives of Africans and their descendants in the Atlantic World. Peer-reviewed research datasets are currently being prepared for publication on the site in August. In the meantime, we would encourage students, scholars & general public to check out the website to learn about the historical origins of contemporary race relations across the Americas. The website has research updates & a list of partnering digital-humanities projects that explore the history of the African diaspora (sites include data on enslaved & free blacks, images, maps, etc).
