CONTRIBUTOR NOTES

GERALD P. BOERSMA is associate professor of theology at Ave Maria University. His research focuses on patristic theology, especially fourth- and fifth-century Latin Christianity and the thought of Augustine. He is the author of Augustine's Early Theology of Image (Oxford, 2016). Currently, he is writing a book on Augustine and the vision of God.

PHILIP BOOTH is professor of finance, public policy, and ethics at St. Mary's University, Twickenham, England. He also holds the position of dean of education, humanities, and social sciences at St. Mary's, having previously been director of research and public engagement. From 2002 to 2016, Booth was academic and research director (previously, editorial and programme director) at the Institute of Economic Affairs. From 2002 to 2015 he was professor of insurance and risk management at Cass Business School. Previously, Booth worked for the Bank of England as an adviser on financial stability issues, and he was also associate dean of Cass Business School and held various other academic positions at City University. Booth is a fellow of the Royal Statistical Society, a fellow of the Institute of Actuaries and an honorary member of the Society of Actuaries of Poland. Philip has a BA in economics from the University of Durham and a PhD from City University.

JOSEPH A. CAROLA, SJ, is a member of the United States Central and Southern Province of the Society of Jesus. He teaches patristic theology and Church history at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome. For twenty-one semesters he served as chaplain for the University of St. Thomas's Catholic Studies Rome program. His various publications include Augustine of Hippo: The Role of the Laity in Ecclesial Reconciliation and three volumes of meditations on priestly life and ministry, entitled Conformed to Christ Crucified. His present area of research considers the retrieval of the Church Fathers in nineteenth-century Catholic theology.

DANIEL FRAMPTON is a freelance writer and has recently completed a PhD at the University of East Anglia, England. His research focuses on Catholic intellectual and artistic culture in twentieth-century Britain.

GRANT KAPLAN holds the Steber Chair in the department of theological studies at Saint Louis University. His most recent book is René Girard, Unlikely Apologist (University of Notre Dame Press).

REV. WALTER F. KEDJERSKI, PhD, a priest of the diocese of Rockville Centre, New York, currently serves as executive director of the Secretariat of Ecumenical and Inter-Religious Affairs of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops. His last assignment was as rector/president of the Seminary of the Immaculate Conception in Huntington, New York, where he first served as vice rector and director of diaconate formation, as well as director of the Sacred Heart Institute for the Continuing Formation of Clergy. Simultaneously, Father Kedjerski was the director of his diocese's Office of Ecumenical and Inter-Religious Affairs, which involved him in a number of ecumenical and interreligious dialogues. He has taught theology at St. John's University in New York and St. Joseph's Seminary in Yonkers. Father Kedjerski has published numerous articles on theology and dialogue with a range of journals including The Princeton Theological Review and Ecumenical Trends. He looks with the greatest of fondness upon his past experiences as a parish priest and pastor.

ANNA BONTA MORELAND is an associate professor in the Department of Humanities and Augustinian Traditions at Villanova University. From 2015 to 2017 she was a visiting fellow and senior fellow at the Center for Ethics and Culture at the University of Notre Dame. Her most recent book, Speak Lord, Your Servant is Listening: Muhammed and Christian Prophecy, will be published by the University of Notre Dame Press.

MICHAEL J. NAUGHTON is currently the director of the Center for Catholic Studies at the University of St. Thomas (Minnesota). He holds the Koch Chair in Catholic Studies and is a full professor in the department of Catholic Studies. He also taught in the College of Business for over 20 years. Dr. Naughton is author, co-author, and co-editor of ten books and more than fifty articles. His newest book is titled Getting Work Right: Labor and Leisure in a Fragmented World (Emmaus Road Publishing, 2019). He helped coordinate and write the Vocation of the Business Leader issued by the Vatican's Dicastery for Promoting Integral Human Development, which has been translated into more than fifteen languages. Dr. Naughton is also board chair of Reell Precision Manufacturing, a producer of torque solutions for transportation, consumer electronics, medical and office automation products with offices in the US, Netherlands, and China. He received his PhD in theology from Marquette University (1991) and an MBA from the University of St. Thomas (1995).

MATÍAS PETERSEN is lecturer in political economy at Los Andes University, Chile, where he is director of the master's program in political studies. His research interests lie at the intersection of economic theory and political philosophy. He has published on rational choice theory, comparative institutional analysis, and on F. A. Hayek's social theory. Petersen has a BA in social sciences from Adolfo Ibáñez University (Chile), an MA in philosophy from Los Andes University (Chile) and a PhD in political economy from King's College London.
